Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Sutter went to Santa Cruz Monday where the Colonel will play his artistic paint brush to the beautifying of that city and incidentally lay by a bit of the filthy lucre.

Carl Bohnett, Howard Trussell, Ralph Gardner, and Bert Campbell went to the Los Banos region Sunday for a duck hunt. They had fair luck, bagging some forty canvass backs, teal and spoonbills. Fine weather for ducks.

Mrs. Elizabeth S. Brown of Oakland is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Bradford this week. Mr. Brown was formerly owner of the Tucson (Ariz.) Republican and U. S. Land Office receiver for that district.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Spence of Stanton, Nebraska, were guests of their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. I. Zion Sunday, having come west for the balance of the winter. At present they are visiting their son, Percy Spence, at Oakland.

NEOLIN—Better Than Leather. Neolin is better than leather because it wears longer, is absolutely waterproof and more flexible. It is light in weight and more durable. It is reliable because it is always uniform in quality and thickness. At E. E. SOWER'S Shoe and Repair Shop.

The Michigan Association of Santa Clara Valley will hold its annual banquet at the Y. M. C. A. building in San Jose, on the evening of January 26. All Wolverines and other former residents of Michigan are cordially invited to attend. Tickets are on sale at the Orchard City Drug Store.

H. M. Richmond, who went from here four years ago to try big farming in "Sunny" Southern Alberta, has purchased 13 acres of S. G. Rodeck on the north side of Campbell and will resume ranching in our beautiful valley. Mr. Richmond will return to Canada in the spring to farm next summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Spalding have moved from Berkeley to Campbell and are occupying the former L. G. Vollman home on Santa Clara road. Mr. Spalding will make this his headquarters and make the surrounding territory for his firm, the Western Precipitation Co. He will be at Almaden for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Selig of San Francisco are the latest arrivals in the Mission Hatchery tract having moved their goods here Sunday. Mr. Selig has been in the newspaper game for some time but has succumbed to the call "back to the land" and the lay of the hen will be sweet music to his ears.

By the hustling of Geo. S. Robson, chairman, and co-workers of the Improvement Club banquet committee, the seat sale has already exceeded the capacity and further sales have been cancelled. A most attractive program is being prepared, the principal feature being the address by Manager Reed of San Jose.

Bohnett Brothers, of growing dairy fame, were the winners of the $25 cash prize given by the Rural Press for the best percentage of butter-fat produced by the dairy herd entered in the contest for the month of December. They have secured the prized patronage of one of the larger hospitals in San Jose after an analytical comparison as to purity and "quality products" of their dairy.

The Campbell Telephone Co. held its annual meeting at the Bank of Campbell Monday evening and elected the following directors: F. M. Righter, A. C. Keeshing, Ed. Howes, Earl Colby, L. Woodard, I. P. Beal, and E. K. Clendenning. The business has grown in the past year both in point of subscribers and finances. At the meeting of the directors next Monday evening the new officers will be elected.

George C. Payne, one of our progressive farmers west of town has named the Payne ranch on Payne avenue "Las Palmas Ranch" and the Press has printed him a neat letter head bearing the new name. The avenue is bordered with sixty beautiful palms from which it takes the name. This ranch was formerly a part of the famous Spanish grant known as the Quito Rancho. Mr. Payne makes a specialty of walnut nursery stock and is a walnut expert.

Easy Winners

In one of the most one-sided basketball games ever played on the local court, the high school team defeated the South San Francisco high team Saturday afternoon by a score of 103 to 8. In the second half our boys were in fit trim and rolled up 71 to 3 points. But one field goal in each half was thrown by the visitors. Kennedy and Oliver Campbell's star forwards worked like machines and the fact that they were in the game again put new life into the rest of the players. The line-up:

So. San Francisco	Campbell
McSweeney	Forward	Kennedy
Smith	"	Oliver
Woodman	Center	Downing
Mahoney	Guard	Duncan
Scampim	"	Huntley

Fred Saxton of the Y. M. C. A. referred the game. Our boys will play Santa Clara here this Friday afternoon and Los Gatos on the following Friday. The line-up of Campbell will be about the same for both games.

The locals had the tables turned on them Tuesday afternoon when the Santa Clara Preps won the basketball game by the score of 46 to 33. The former game resulted in a victory for Campbell 71 to 49.

Better and Cheaper Roads

The Board of Supervisors soon will call a special election at which the taxpayers and other voters of this county will decide whether they prefer to procure permanent paved roads within the next few years by means of a bond issue or to do as now, get a few miles every year by direct taxation at a much heavier cost and with the certainty that it will be twenty years even at that before the valley has a complete system. The various chambers of commerce throughout the county have been working together harmoniously on this road proposition for several months, and at the representative meeting held in the chamber of commerce convention hall at San Jose last week the plan of roads to be improved that had been worked out by the general committee in conjunction with the Supervisors was unanimously approved, showing that public sentiment is ripe for the movement. The bond issue of $2,000,000, as proposed last fall when the project was first taken up, was later reduced to $1,500,000, the committee feeling that it would be advisable to have a smaller issue. In consequence of this action a number of roads had to be eliminated, but those agreed upon connect up the leading highways in all sections of the county and open up new ones that will be highly important as commercial roads and also for their scenic attractions.

Just as soon as the Supervisors name the date on which the election is to be held the general committee and the chambers of commerce in all portions of the county will begin a vigorous campaign in behalf of the bond issue, and facts and figures will be presented to prove conclusively that the bonds not only will insure permanent roads within three years or less but also will effect a large saving in taxes to every individual property owner.

A Well-Merited Rebuke

The wife of a western merchant answered the door bell and found a peddler on the front porch. He was selling the "greatest potato parer ever invented," and gave her a demonstration that convinced her at once, and she handed over the quarter. When her husband came home she showed him the bargain and told him what she paid for it. Imagine her consternation when he said: "I have a gross of these down in the store and I sell them for 10 cents when I find a purchaser." The woman always has the last word, and hers was to the point; "Then for goodness sake, why don't you let people know what you have for sale?" Moral: Advertise to your home town folks in your home town paper—then your own wife won't ever "get stung."

The death of Mrs. A. C. Covert of Los Gatos, aunt of Will E. Wright is expected at any time as the lady has been unconscious for some time. She is the sister of R. G. Mitchell in the Willows, of D. J., and J. P., and Moses Mitchell. Two of the brothers are missing.

The Guild of the Congregational church, with the assistance of the other members of the congregation, have purchased a fine new range for the kitchen, and additional dishes, silver and table linen for the dining-room. This will enable the dining-room committees to prepare the tables without so much labor, altho there is still need for more dishes, which the ladies hope to provide at some future time.

DADDY'S EVENING
FAIRY TALE

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FROGS' BED-TIME.

"Well," said Grandpa Frog, "it's a Cold Day."

"How Bright of you to say so," said Mr. Pond Frog with a Grin.

"It's very Rude of you to Talk to me in such a manner," retorted Grandpa Frog. "It is a Cold Day. Perhaps you know it—but then I know it, too, and there is never any Harm in Saying something one knows."

"It all depends," said Mr. Pond Frog. "Depends on what?" snapped Grandpa Frog.

"You might know," answered Mr. Pond Frog slowly, "that Snakes like to Eat us up. But I hope you wouldn't go up to a Snake and bow politely and say: 'I beg your pardon, Mr. Snake, but it must be almost your Eating time, and I know that you like Frogs. I also know that there are a great many living down yonder.'"

"Would you say that?" asked Mr. Pond Frog with a Wicked Grin. "You know that, you see, and you say there is no Harm in saying something you know."

"You're absurd, that's what you are," said Grandpa Frog. "Of course, I wouldn't Tell everything I knew. Some things would be very Silly to tell. You should see that I know the difference. There is no Harm in Talking about the Weather."

"Yes, there is!" snapped Mr. Pond Frog.

"What Harm?" asked Grandpa Frog in surprise.

"Because the Weather is Talked about altogether too much. It just has things all its own way because we have Talked about it so often. It's thoroughly, absolutely spoilt!"

He Was Too Tired to Argue.

"Well, I'm going to Talk about the Weather, just the same," said Grandpa Frog.

"Yes," said Mr. Pond Frog in a Hoarse, Weary, Mournful Voice. "I suppose everyone will. I can't Teach such Wisdom as this. Animals, Creatures and Grown-Ups won't Listen."

"I'm glad you see it's hardly worth while," said Grandpa Frog. "And now I will tell you what I had to Say at the very start of our Conversation, before you were so Rude as to interrupt me."

"I'm never Rude," retorted Mr. Pond Frog.

"Oh, very well," said Grandpa Frog as he sighed heavily, "but let me finish what I have to Say. It is Cold. You can't Deny it. And I'm ready for Bed. Winter will soon be coming on—and anyway the Cold Weather is here. That's enough for me. I'm Tired and ready for a good Winter's nap."

"Are you ready to go to Bed for the whole winter?" asked Mr. Pond Frog.

"Yes, I am," said Grandpa Frog.

"Well, now come to think of it," said Mr. Pond Frog. "I do believe I am."

"You see, it wasn't so Silly of me to Talk about the Weather, after all," said Grandpa Frog, giving a big Chuckle.

"I would have soon found out I wanted to Sleep," said Mr. Pond Frog, in a very Sleepy Voice. For now he was too Tired and Sleepy to Argue or Quarrel.

"But," said Grandpa Frog, "you can't go to Sleep yet. You must tell all the other Frogs that it's Bed-Time. And I will help you."

Poor Mr. Pond Frog could hardly Hop about, so Tired was he after the long Summer. But he went to the different places in the Pond Grandpa Frog told him to, and Croaked everywhere: "Bed-Time, Winter Bed-Time." Grandpa Frog went about, too, and said: "Get your Bed of Mud. Roll yourself up in it. The Ice will come soon, and if we're not Warm, we'll Freeze."

Mr. Pond Frog heard him say that and Laughed, even though he was so Sleepy. "Of course," he said, "I won't keep Warm well Freeze. There you are again saying something everyone knows!"

But Grandpa Frog didn't Hear, for he was showing some of the Younger Frogs how to roll up in mud where they could Sleep all Winter.

And after that the Frogs stopped Croaking—and probably Snored instead—but they covered up so well in their Beds of Mud that we couldn't Hear if we tried.

The Great Hungarian Plain

FISHERMAN'S HOUSE ON THE HORTOBAGY RIVER.

TWICE have the Russians threatened invasion of that vast expanse of golden corn-land, the great Hungarian plain, and again it was imperiled by the Roumanians. Debreczen, Arad, Temesvar, Szegedin—the important centers of the plain—all lie in the path of the armies that might sweep down upon Budapest from the Carpathians and from the Roumanian frontier, writes J. M. Dodington in Country Life. Debreczen, that most Oriental-looking of towns, with its flat-roofed houses inclosing a large, open square across which the women stroll, veiled in eastern fashion. Debreczen, which has known battles and sieges innumerable, which was famous as the seat of Kossuth's short-lived parliament; Arad, a rather commonplace town on the banks of the River Maros, celebrated throughout Hungary for its delicious fish of varied species; Temesvar, the capital of the Banat, essentially modern, noisy with electric cars and brilliant with electric lights; Szegedin, even more stirring and up-to-date than Temesvar, with manufactures of carpets and friezes, of ropes and sailcloth, which render it prosperous exceedingly.

But all, ancient or modern, are centers of the enormous grain trade which was growing greater every day, as far-spreading stretches of plain were being cleared of scrub, vast swamps drained and turned into rippling cornfields. Roads were being made, railways projected, in every direction.

There is an end to such activities now. One begins to hope that the Hortobagy plain, the happy hunting-ground of sportsmen, native and foreign, will be left in all its wild charm, safe for many years to come, from civilization's prosaic hand.

Where Vast Herds Roam.

The great Hortobagy plain lies west of Debreczen and extends to the Tisza river. It is a vast, uncultivated prairie land over which roam countless herds of cattle, horses, sheep, swine, watched over by brown-skinned guardians whose rank varies according to their vocations and is most tenacious of kept. Thus that most exalted of aristocrats, the csikos, guardian of that noblest of animals, the horse, disdains all intercourse with him who stands upon the next rung of the social ladder, the gulyas or cattleman. In his turn the gulyas regards with the utmost contempt the shepherd—juhász—while the juhász turns with scorn from that member of the lowest of castes, the kondas or swineherd.

The work of all consists in day and night watching over their animals, but—more especially in the case of the gulyas—the watering of the herds is their hardest task. The drawing up of buckets of water from deep-sunk wells for thousands of heads of cattle is no light job. It would be an impossible one during the scorching heat of summer, were it not for the small lakes and ponds which dot the plain, and also for the Hortobagy river, which flows through it from north to south and whose waters never fail. There is another fairly big river, the Arkos, but it dries up during the hot season. In its waters there are, naturally, found none of the fish which are so abundant in the Hortobagy.

The csikos of the great plain are very fine horsemen. In the War of Independence, 1848-49, they joined the bands of the dreaded Alexander Rozsa and pursued the fleeing Austrians, throwing their lances from a great distance and tearing the foe from his saddle, to lie at their mercy on the ground.

Paradise for Sportsmen.

The reedy margins of the Hortobagy river abound with snipe and mallard, but it is among the creeks and lakelets of the northern part of the great plain, when the autumn rains cause them to overflow and unite in shallow seas, that the sportsman finds his paradise. There, during October and November, the wild geese are found in millions. The sodden meadows are covered by their innumerable flocks, as if by snowdrifts. When they rise they obscure the sunlight, and the noise of their wings is like the rush of a mighty whirlwind. In ditches, in pits dug by the river's brink, defiant of rheumatic pangs, the gunner hides, and tremendous is the toll he takes. It is a most exciting sport, and one is almost inclined to agree with the native who remarked to me: "Ah, he who has once taken part at a wild goose shooting will be a slave of him forever!"

Until the brooks and ponds are covered with ice the sport endures; then, water no longer procurable, at a given moment, as if by preconcerted signal, in one immense mass the great birds spread their wings and are off to the shores of the Lower Danube.

I suppose that in all lands there is an innate antagonism between the dwellers upon the plains and the natives of the rugged mountain land—witness the distrust, spoken or unspoken, of Celt for Sassenach and Sassenach for Celt. But in no other European country is it so marked as in Magyarland. Between the Lowlander of the great Hungarian plain and the Highlander of the mountains which form its boundary there is a great gulf fixed, across which the pairs of dark eyes glare into each other with contempt unutterable. The Lowlander calls the mountain land "the crooked country," and makes no bones about stating that the ways of its inhabitants are as tortuous as their scenery. He despises them for the poverty which wrings a scanty subsistence from the barren soil and compels them to live on maize porridge and barley bread. Above all, he scorns their poetical fancies and dreamy legends, for to him poet and wastrel are synonymous terms.

In his turn, the Highlander loathes the monotony of the plains; to him the misty blue ridges and snow-capped peaks, the narrow, pine-clad valleys and roaring torrents are the ideal home. He pours contempt upon the heavy, dull-witted Lowlander, whose mind, he says, is a blank, whose god is his belly, and whose only joy is to stuff himself with pork and wheaten bread! But here the mountaineer does something less than justice to his lowland brother, for the greatest of Hungarian poets, Sandor Petofy, he whose genius is so many-sided that he has been compared to Burns and Byron, to Beranger and de Musset, to Tennyson and Shakespeare, is a dweller upon the great plain.

Varied Phases of the Great Plain.

One wonders at what season of the year the allies will finally debouch upon the Hortobagy. Will they see it amid autumn floods, when rain descends in torrents, not for days or for weeks, but for months at a time—when, speaking of their weather, the natives say: "Here we ought to have not one God but two, one who would let it rain and another to make it dry again?" Will they see the wild geese roaming in countless thousands over the sodden grassland? Or will the hosts of our allies come in the depths of the bitter winter, when the cattle have been driven home and silence reigns over the empty, snow-covered plain? A silence broken only by that terrible wind of the Hortobagy, which howls and screams like a pack of insatiate demons over the frozen waste. Or will they come during the months of May and June, when it wears a mantle of tenderest green, when the fragrant breeze, exhilarating as champagne, blows softly over a carpet of fairest blossom whose kaleidoscopic coloring extends as far as the eye can reach? Or will it be when the pitiless sun beats down from a sky of brass upon a parched and gasping land, when the Fata Morgana, the mirage more wonderful here than on the great Sahara itself, will show them sheets of rippling water where, a moment before, was sun-baked plain; will show them shady woods and nestling villages and slender church spires and cattle standing knee-deep in cool, dark pools?

Autumn, winter, spring, summer—which season will see the coming of the deliverer? For to the Transylvanian fettered to the Magyar, to the Magyar bound with chains of iron to the Austrian, he will be a deliverer though bearing the outward semblance of an invader. When will the deliverer march in his millions across the Great Hungarian plain?

Brought Tobacco to Europe.

The introduction of the tobacco plant in Europe in 1558 is due to Francisco Fernandez, a court physician to Philip II of Spain, who had been sent to Mexico on a mission of investigation into native products.

HOSPITAL SHIP OF
U. S. TO SET PACEWill Be First of Its Kind Ever
Built in the World.

WILL HAVE BEST FACILITIES

Uncle Sam Will Spend $2,500,000 in Building Vessel That Will Eclipse
Those in Use by Other Nations.

Uncle Sam's navy soon is to possess the first hospital ship built exclusively for that purpose. The warring nations of Europe possess hospital ships but in every case these are makeshifts, commercial ships converted to the uses of the navy and not built especially for the purpose for which they are being used. Uncle Sam will spend $2,500,000 in making his new floating hospital, the first of its kind ever built, complete in every detail from the keel up.

It had been realized for years that the United States navy needed more hospital facilities, not only as a preparatory measure against war but also take care of its large personnel in time of peace. Finally, after many years of constant endeavor on the part of the navy department, congress appropriated $2,500,000 for the construction of a really modern and complete hospital ship, to be built in a government navy yard. For six months Dr. R. C. Holcomb of the bureau of medicine and surgery of the navy department cooperated with the bureau of construction and repair to lay the plans for a vessel that would eclipse in ship construction and hospital facilities anything that the world has ever produced before.

To Prevent Rolling.

In the first place, the vessel is to be furnished with several stabilizers, so that she will roll as little as possible and thus permit of the performance of delicate operations even in a comparatively heavy sea. The floating hospital is to be 460 feet long, by 60 feet wide, with a capacity of 300 patients during ordinary times and 500 in an emergency.

In addition to the wards, there will be several special consulting rooms where outside patients, or day patients, may come and receive treatment. One of these will be in connection with the ear, eye and throat equipment, which is to be as complete as any to be found in a city hospital. A soundproof room for testing the hearing is also provided for in the plans, as well as a dark room for testing the eyesight, and an X-ray room where patients may be examined for internal injuries, with a separate room for the development of the photographic plates.

The wards are to be divided up into separate classes for the treatment of special diseases, two of the largest wards being isolated for contagious cases. These wards will communicate with the rest of the ship by only one door, which may be heavily guarded, and by chutes through which the laundry and bed linen may be shot down to the sterilizing apparatus below.

A diet kitchen, with all the latest culinary equipment, is likewise provided for, and Dr. Holcomb has invented a new and clever arrangement by which each patient may receive his food while hot. This is a steam table on wheels. The apparatus is filled with hot food in the kitchen, on the lower deck, rolled down the hall and into an elevator, where it is taken up to the ward deck. It is then wheeled into the wards and down the aisles of beds, the plate of each patient being supplied from its steaming vat.

Many Special Rooms.

Connected with each of the wards on the new hospital ship will be several special small rooms for different kinds of cases. There will be a quiet room where very serious cases will be taken; a special room for kidney and bladder diseases; a special hydrotherapeutic room and a thermo-therapeutic room, in addition to special and individual operating rooms.

The ship will also contain a biological laboratory, a dental laboratory and an animal yard, where monkeys and guinea pigs will be kept for the purpose of testing theories of germ infection. In an obscure corner of the ship there is to be a morgue, connected with the refrigerating plant, where the bodies of dead officers and sailors may be preserved and brought back to their families at home, instead of being buried over the side of the ship, as was formerly the custom.

As compared with this new hospital ship, with its electrical devices, its scientific equipment, its vacuum-cleaning apparatus, its elevators and its modern toilet facilities, the hospital ships of even a few years ago appear medieval in construction.

Sugar Beet Industry Grows.

Preliminary returns received by Uncle Sam from practically all operating beet-sugar factories in the United States indicate a production of 918,800 short tons of sugar during the current campaign. The area harvested amounted to 680,000 acres, and the beets, 6,671,000 short tons. This is the largest acreage and tonnage of beets ever harvested in the United States, and the sugar production exceeds the highest preceding crop, that of 1915, by more than 44,000 tons. During the past five years the United States has consumed about 4,000,000 tons of sugar annually.

Uncle Sam's Models Show Man's Rise
From Burden Bearer to Master of Air

The photograph shows the most conspicuous leaps of progress, covering many centuries of time, in the development of means of transportation, as illustrated by models gathered by the Smithsonian institute. The models show man's evolution from the state of a burden bearer to that of master of the air. The flying machine shown is the first gliding model.

Uncle Sam has gathered in the Smithsonian institute at Washington several hundred models which show in a graphic manner man's evolution from a burden bearer to master of the air.

Man was his own burden bearer for a long time before it occurred to him to use domesticated animals to relieve himself. The early models in the series show how he finally developed the idea of using animals as carriers. The llama was the first beast of burden, then came the dromedary, the elephant and the horse.

At first goods were simply piled on the animal's back and it was some time before anything in the form of pack saddles was evolved. One step in this direction is shown by the panniers or baskets which hang on each side of the llama. An advance in the general evolution of transportation is illustrated by the American Indian "travols" or "travails," comprising two long poles or shafts, which were attached to a dog or a horse and allowed to trail along behind. On these the Indians and colonists piled their game, fuel and forage and even used such conveyances to transport people. A primitive sledge made from the forked limb of a tree and covered with cross sticks was probably the next step. This was attached to the animal by something similar to traces and permitted to drag on the ground. Simple straps like the Eskimo dog traces were primitive forms of the modern trace. Rough parallel runners were soon found to make the sledge slide easier and before long a platform was built upon the runners. Thus the sledge was developed and used by most peoples, whether there was snow in their country or not.

Enter the Roller.

Having first transported burdens on his own back, or that of his animal, and then dragged them along the ground, man seemed to have realized that cylindrical objects might be rolled. History relates that rollers with a small diameter were used as such by the ancients of many nations, under sledges, and for moving large blocks of stone with the assistance of a lever or an inclined plane. Another method is illustrated in the museum by a model of a short stone pillar attached by pivots in the center of each end to a frame which, when pulling, caused the pillar to roll, a method said to have been adopted by Ctesiphon when transporting the columns for the temple of Diana at Ephesus. In Virginia and the neighboring states hogheads of tobacco were rolled along much the same as the above stone. Two barrels coupled in tandem within a frame were transported in this manner from the forests to the shipping point, as shown by the next model in the series. Another miniature illustrates a scheme of Paeonius, who built cylindrical crates around marble prisms in the first century, B. C., when moving stone for the base of the colossal statue of Apollo.

It is believed that the roller, or this rolling crate, was the forerunner of the wheel, which was the first great step in the art of land transportation, although the advance was very slow with the ages. The idea of making the axle and wheel separate was the second great step and no greater discovery has ever been made. The invention of the felloe and spoke soon followed and eventually a complete cart or carriage was evolved. The first vehicles were equipped with but two wheels, made of wood. Examples of early Egyptian chariots modeled after originals dating back to the Ptolemaic era, 300 B. C., are to be seen in the miniature exhibited. From here on, many models illustrate the rapid advances. Among them are a "carreta" or ox-cart created in Spain and used in New Mexico until recently; a Persian farm cart of 1870; a Red River cart, common in the United States and Canada; a conestoga or "prairie schooner," said to have traveled from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia in 20 days; an example of the famous colonial "one-hoss shay," celebrated by Holmes; a stage coach used between 1825 and 1860, and modern examples of tip-carts and farm and army wagons, besides other model equipages

Land Carriers Shown.

Some full-sized examples of land carriers are also shown. They include a Japanese sedan chair of 1888, a French sedan chair, a sled with an attached basket-like body from Kamchatka, a one-wheeled Korean passenger vehicle, a primitive Mexican freight cart and a native cart from the Philippine islands.

A number of interesting locomotive models illustrate man's continued experimentation with wheels for transportation. Besides the models, the museum has on exhibition the original "Stourbridge Lion," the first full-sized locomotive ever run in the United States, and the locomotive "John Bull," operated in this country in 1831.

Several models, including one of the Selden machines, demonstrate the early development of the automobile; the latest advance in wheel transportation is shown by three full-sized cars manufactured in this country.

Finally, to complete the series, comes the model of the airplane, in which man is completing the conquest of the air.

Dog Helps Man Make Living.
A dog named Rover, owned by a gentleman in Carpinteria, Cal., has been taught to turn the wheel that furnishes the power for his master's scissors-grinding machine. Rover gets on the wheel of his own accord and merrily treads, while his master sharpens scissors and knives. The dog seems to think it a game devised for his special amusement, and when business is slack he will run to the wheel and bark reproachfully at his master until the good man feels obliged to attach the rope which turns the wheel. Rover never seems so happy as when business is brisk, and he can send his large wheel around and around for a whole morning. He will then sleep for half an hour after he has had his dinner, and be ready for work again with his master in the afternoon.—The American Boy.

Oliveless Days.
British Consul Nugent said at a banquet in Chicago:
"They tell a good story about a Greek army corps that surrendered to the Germans and was taken into food-stripped Germany to be the guest of the nation."
"At Chemnitz, the story runs, a committee of famished Greek soldiers waited on the German commandant and said:
"They told us that here in Chemnitz, commandant, the government would at least give us some rations."
"Yes, and that's right, too," said the German commandant genially, as he took a huge packet of cards from his desk. "Here are your Greek rations each specially got up by us for our revered Greek guests. They entitle every Greek soldier to six olives a day five days per week, and, furthermore, on the two 'oliveless days,' they entitle each and every one of you to a cracker and a half-pint of coffee substitute."

STOP! CALOMEL IS QUICKSILVER
It's mercury! Attacks the bones, salivates and makes you sick.
There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when 50 cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic—a perfect substitute for calomel.
It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can't salivate.
Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tonic because it is perfectly harmless.
Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tonic instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tonic acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.—Adv.

Shutting Up the Shop.
It is rather surprising to the foreigner visiting South American countries for the first time to find most of the best and prettiest shops almost hermetically sealed at night. If the building is of the older style of construction the heavy shutters are closed and locked by iron bars; if a more modern building, the flexible sliding doors and windows are completely drawn, and the passerby can see nothing within the shop.
All is darkness save the light of the street lamps; no brilliantly lighted windows help to add cheer and brightness to the street.
In European and American cities the average merchant is willing to spend money freely for nightly display of his wares and merchandise. He realizes and appreciates the publicity. The evening crowds upon our streets are highly entertained and even instructed by window displays of the busy streets.
Herein lies the difference; for, as a rule, the South American streets, busy and attractive during the day, are quite the reverse at night. Even in some of the larger cities the old custom of hermetically sealing the shop at night prevails.

New Place-Names for Canada.
By the decisions of the geographic board of Canada made in April and May three "Trouts" are eliminated from our list of place-names. Which is well, because there are plenty of "Trouts" left, enough in fact to still cause confusion.
A lake and river emptying into Hudson bay, in the Patricia district of northern Ontario, have been relieved of the name, Trout, and given that of Sutton; a lake and river in Saguenay country, Quebec, that bore both the name Trout and Petite, have been given the Indian name, Matamek; and a third Trout disappears by calling the river north of Pontiac river, in north Quebec, Opamwastik.
A river empties into James bay, south of Eastmain river, Mistassini territory, Quebec, had been called Sheep river. Its new name is Miatikush, this Indian name meaning sheep.
In the new north these Indian names seem particularly appropriate; most of them are euphonic, and they are associated with the traditions and the history of the original population.

French Game Laws Suspended.
The poor people of France, as well as the wealthy, are taking advantage of the privilege recently granted by M. Meline, the minister of agriculture, to all sportsmen, of high or low degree, to shoot the wild game that, since the war, has become superabundant, doing great damage to crops.
Hares, pheasants and wild ducks have been the chief offenders, and these are being killed in great numbers, thus not only saving growing vegetation, but furnishing food for the people.
It was thought at first that the minister's instructions included only rich sportsmen and owners of game preserves, but he made it clear in a subsequent statement that, in the interest of agriculture, the shooting privilege was extended to everybody in all departments.

LIKED "BIBLE GUY"
MAN WHO CARRIED THE WORD POPULAR WITH SOLDIERS.
Boys in Blue Stationed Along the Rio Grande Unanimously of Opinion That Visitor Was Strictly All Right.

It was pretty close to taps when a small car puffed up to the little border station on the Rio Grande, satisfied the sentry and came inside the earthworks fortification. Its driver, a tall, ruddy-cheeked young man, who looked as though he might be fresh out of college, brought the mail—he'd succeeded in crossing a swollen creek in his car when the Mexican mail man didn't care to try it, and he brought also a carload of Bibles.
The soldiers in the border station called him "the Bible guy," and the opinion was expressed more than once that "the Bible guy was all right." There are a number of him on the Mexican border. They are representatives of the American Bible society, and their business is giving away Bibles and Testaments to the soldiers who are doing border patrol duty. This particular one had come east from El Paso, a matter of 450 miles, and did not expect to stop until he reached the Gulf. He found a considerable demand for his little olive-drab-bound Testaments and Bibles, as well as real friendliness for himself.
He was a modest young man, but he admitted that a good many interesting things happened to a fellow who carried the Word along the border. Sometimes one miscalculated or found the roads worse than he expected and had to camp out overnight—he carried a few provisions and a skillet always to be prepared for that emergency. And, of course, one did have to know how to pull an automobile out of a mud-hole by one-man power and quite a lot more outdoor things.
"Do the Mexicans ever bother you?" someone asked him.
The Bible guy laughed as though that were the best joke in the world.
"No, indeed," he said. "Why should they bother me? Besides, you know, I'm prepared for Mexicans as well as soldiers. I carry copies of the Bible in Spanish and find a lot of people who are glad to get them. And now—if you'll excuse me—I've got a lot to do to this car."

Dying Villages.
It is the American village that most betrays the impulse of our civilization—a civilization that perpetually overreaches itself only to be obliged to surrender again and again to nature everything it has gained. How many thousands of villages, frost-bitten, palsied, full of the morbid, bloodless death-in-life—villages that have lost, if they ever possessed, the secret of self-perpetuation. He scattered across the continent! Even in California I used to find them on long cross-country walks, villages often enough not half a century old, but in a state of essential decay. Communities that have come into being on the flood tide of an enterprise too rapidly worked out, they all signify some lost cause of a material kind that has left high and dry—like the neutral areas in an old painting where the colors, incompletely mixed and of perishable quality, have evaporated with time.—Van Wyck Brooks, in Seven Arts.

Map Has Colored Roads.
South Carolina is one of the states which have marked the poles and signboards along the main roads by colored bands indicating the various routes of which the roads form parts. There are nine of these through routes in all, crossing the state in every direction. In order to make it as easy as possible for the traveler to follow any of them, the state commissioner of agriculture, commerce and industries has issued a map of South Carolina in which the routes are indicated by the same colors used in the wayside marking. This is carrying the idea of marking roads of maximum convenience further than has been done by many other states, and is particularly interesting because South Carolina has no state highway department.

Bicycle Balancer.
An apparatus has been invented by Eugene Tourtier of Paris, France,—which gives bicycles, motorcycles and every other similar vehicle a vertical equilibrium regardless of whether or not the road is level. It is merely necessary to support the machine in an upright position by operating a lever attached to the handlebar, according to the Popular Science Monthly.
The lever can be operated while the bicycle is moving, making it possible for a rider to remain in his seat as the wheel comes to a stop and to start again without dismounting. The steel rod supports are strong enough to sustain a combined weight of 800 pounds. Bicycles fitted with the balancer have been used by the Swiss police for some time.

Good Reason Why.

ANIMALS AT WORK
WAR'S EFFECT UPON LABOR CONDITIONS IN ENGLAND.
Novel Experiments Have Proved Satisfactory, as in the Case of Store-keeper With His Parrot—Elephant Replaces Horse.

Many strange and unexpected cases are on record in which animals and birds have proved themselves useful to mankind, more often serving their masters more reliably than many human beings would do under similar circumstances.
At times of stress like the present, such dumb servants have proved themselves particularly useful, a good instance in point being provided by the case of a gentleman in the west of England who recently lost his garden-keeper through the problem of his lawn, about which he had always been very particular, for the grass quickly threatened to make his once trim grounds look very much like a wilderness.
Then he hit upon a brilliant idea. Wiring off the ground, he turned in a dozen guinea pigs, who promptly proceeded to nibble away at the grass as evenly and neatly as any mowing machine could have done, much to the master's delight.
Similarly, an East End tradesman lately found himself short-handed owing to the war, and after some thought, this man hit upon a solution of the problem.
He happened to possess a pet parrot, and this bird he placed in the outer part of his shop and trained it to call "Shop!" whenever anyone entered by way of the street door.
The parrot very quickly learned its lesson, with the result that its master was no longer obliged to spend all his time on the lookout for customers, but could attend to other matters, knowing he could count upon his new assistant to warn him of anybody's approach.
The intelligence of dogs is known to everyone, but a dog as a golf caddy is somewhat of a novelty, you will admit. Nevertheless, the animal is no imaginary character, but a real caddy, who works on the links of a certain widely known course. Besides carrying clubs, this dog proves himself very useful in the matter of discovering lost golf balls, nosing about until he is successful.
But the war has made one strange spectacle possible in England. In Sheffield an elephant may be seen drawing heavy loads along the streets. It is claimed for this particular animal that he can empty a nineteen-ton wagon of coal in two journeys. Camels have also been employed by the same firm, but as draft animals cannot be compared with the elephants.—London Answers.

Troubles Never Come Singly.
A resident of Boothbay, Me., was told by a neighbor that his son's cow was out in another pasture, and started to bring her in. He found a cow loose and set out in chase.
For an hour or two he chased one of the most obstinate and disgusting animals ever born into the cow breed. And at last he caught her and brought her out to the road and was leading her triumphantly home, when he met a neighbor who asked him what he was doing with another neighbor's cow. And so it proved. For the original stray cow was still in the wrong pasture, but tied securely to a tree. The other cow had had a perfect right to it grazing ground.
The exasperated gentleman then set out again and this time found the right stray cow and took her home.
When he arrived at his son's place with his son's cow he found one of his own cows in his son's field and eating up the son's cabbages.

Kings Who Reigned Briefly.
Sixty-eight years is a long time to wear a crown. Many other monarchs have hardly had time to get comfortably settled upon their thrones, before death or abdication overtook them.
John I of France has to his credit a reign of only five days. For brevity that is hard to match.
Napoleon was emperor the second time for 100 days, and then started for St. Helena. Louis XVIII, whom he so rudely deposed in March, 1815, had occupied his throne less than one year.
Francis II ruled but a year, Louis X two years and Louis VIII three years.

Venice Has Electrical Ears.
According to a newspaper correspondent who recently visited Venice, the Austrian airmen have made more than thirty raids on that famous city. The observation station there is provided with sensitive electrical microphones, which are said to detect the noise of the motors on the Austrian planes the moment they leave Trieste, some sixty miles away. Electric sirens are immediately sounded to warn everyone of the approach of hostile aircraft, which cover the distance between the cities in something like forty minutes. Thus ample time is afforded for completing the antiaircraft artillery preparations before the first Austrian airman heaves in sight.—Scientific American.

SWISS HOTELS WONDROUS
Stand in Solitary Grandeur, But Lack Nothing That Makes for Comfort of Traveler.
You may climb up the heights by the aid of railways, funiculars, racks-and-pins, diligences and sledges, and when nothing but your own feet will take you any further you will see in Switzerland a grand hotel, magically and incredibly raised aloft in the mountains.
It is solitary—no town, no houses, nothing but this hotel hemmed in on all sides by snowy crags and made impregnable by precipices and treacherous snow and ice.
At the great redrawing of the map of Europe, when the lesser nationalities are to disappear, the Swissers will take armed refuge in their farthest grand hotels and there defy the mandates of the concert.
For the hotel, no matter how remote it be, lacks nothing that is mentioned in the dictionary of comfort. Beyond its walls your life is not worth twelve hours' purchase.
You would not die of hunger, because you would perish of cold.
At best you might hit on some peasant's cottage in which the standards of existence had not changed for a century.
But once pass within the portals of the grand hotel, and you become the spoiled darling of an intricate organization that laughs at mountains, avalanches and frost.

The Moral Life.
Moral principle is not thinking the right thing, but doing it. It is giving 16 ounces to the pound and 36 inches to the yard. It is treating your neighbor kindly. It is not worrying others. There are some people who pride themselves on holding to high moral principle, who are an exceeding great annoyance to the people they meet. Of all the unprincipled things in this world, making people unhappy is the meanest. Yet there are many people who are sticklers to moral duty, doing that very thing every day. He is a mean thief who will take from another his peace of mind. One man told us he didn't sleep a whole night because of a needless remark a thoughtful friend made to him. There are many people who are such confirmed materialists that they think you can only do harm to a man by hitting him with a club or stealing his chickens. They don't seem to know there is a mental and spiritual world, where all real feeling dwells and where the deepest torture may be inflicted.—Ohio State Journal.

Odd Combination Kills.
Matthew Grissom, solicitor for a New York life insurance company, was burned to death in a peculiar way. He had set a steel trap for a rat, and the night before a neighbor's dog was shut up in the room by accident. The dog upset a can of gasoline, saturating the atmosphere of the room with gasoline fumes.
About four o'clock Grissom was awakened by the cries of the dog, took a light and went to release him. As he entered the room the fumes of the gasoline became ignited. An explosion followed, and Grissom was enveloped in the flames which filled the room, rendering escape impossible.

LENDING A HELPING HAND
Teamster Gave Handcart Pusher a "Lift" That Was Something to Be Appreciated.
Here is an interesting street scene, drawn by a writer:
The handcart was of a familiar sort—a pair of high wheels with a long platform of slats resting on the axle and a crossbar at one end for a handle. A man stands behind the crossbar and breasts it to propel the vehicle.
The handcart was piled high with big bags filled with waste paper—a cumbersome, heavy load that would have been hard to handle anywhere, and was doubly troublesome going up the slope from Nassau street to Broadway. The handcart man had to bend over the bar and push with all his might to keep the load moving at all.
Coming up behind him was a driver with an empty truck, drawn by a pair of big horses. When the driver saw what was ahead, he started up his team a little and skillfully set the end of the pole square in the middle of the rearmost bag on the handcart, where he could push to the greatest purpose without disturbing the load. Thus the horses began to push the handcart up the hill.
All the handcart man had to do was to stand up, hold on to the handlebar, and keep the handcart straight. The big horses, guided by the friendly driver, were doing the pushing; and so, easily enough, the man got his load up the rest of the slope and round to the easy level of Broadway.—New York Sun.

THE NEWEST REMEDY FOR Backache, Rheumatism and Dropsy.
Kidney, Bladder and Uric Acid troubles bring misery to many. When the kidneys are weak or diseased, these natural filters do not cleanse the blood sufficiently, and the poisons are carried to all parts of the body. There follow depression, aches and pains, heaviness, drowsiness, irritability, headaches, chilliness and rheumatism. In some people there are sharp pains in the back and loins, distressing bladder disorders and sometimes obstinate dropsy. The uric acid sometimes forms into gravel or kidney stones. When the uric acid affects the muscles and joints, it causes lumbago, rheumatism, gout or sciatica. This is the time to try "An-uric," the new discovery of Doctor Pierce for Kidney trouble and Backache. Neglected kidney trouble is responsible for many deaths, and Insurance Companies examining doctors always test the water of an applicant before a policy will be issued. If you wish to know your condition send a sample of your water to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and describe your symptoms. It will be examined without any expense to you, and Dr. Pierce or his Staff of Assisting Physicians will inform you truthfully.

Of Some Importance

It may be of interest to you to know that the management of the Columbia Hospital of San Jose in their search for a source of milk supply chose our plant as the one whose sanitary conditions were unimpeachable.

We feel that this is no small compliment to us, when we consider the care that it is necessary for the management of this institution to exercise in choosing the food supply for all their patients.

That which is used to build up one's strength while in the Hospital will also do wonders toward keeping one from under the Doctor's care.

PLEASURE'S ROSES.

For Revenue Only

A doctor in an Iowa town expressed the opinion that newspapers are run for revenue only, whereupon the editor of a country paper in a neighboring town expressed himself in the following statement published in his paper:

"What in thunder do doctors run for anyway? Do they run for glory? One good, strong, healthy doctor's bill will run this office six months. An editor works half a day for $3 with an investment of $3000; a doctor looks wise and works ten minutes for $200 with an investment of 3 cents for catnip and a pill box that costs $1.35. The doctor goes to college for two or three years, gets a diploma and a string of words the devil himself cannot pronounce, cultivates a look of gravity that he pawns for wisdom, gets a box of pills, a cayuse and a meat saw, and sticks out a shingle a full-fledged doctor. He will doctor you until you die at a stipulated price per visit, and puts them in as thick as your pocket-book will permit. An editor never gets his education finished; he learns as long as he lives and studies all his life. He eats bran, mush and liver, he takes his pay in hay and turnips and keeps the doctor in town by refraining from printing the truth about him. We would like to live in that neighboring town and run a newspaper six months and see if the doctor would change his mind about running a newspaper for revenue only. If we didn't get some glory out of it we would agree to take one dose of his pills after first saying our prayers. If the editor makes a mistake he has to apologize for it, but if the doctor makes one he buries it. If we make one there is a lawsuit, tall swearing and the smell of sulphur, but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and a smell of varnish. A doctor can use a word a foot long, but if the editor uses it he has to spell it. If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he will charge the man for the visit. If the editor calls on another man's wife he gets a charge of buckshot. A medical college can make a doctor. You can't make an editor; he has to be born one. When the doctor gets drunk it is a case of 'overcome by heat,' and if he dies it is heart failure. When an editor gets drunk it is too much booze and if he dies it is delirium tremens. The editor works to keep from starving, while the doctor works to ward off the gout. The editor helps men to live better and the doctor assists them to die easy. The doctor pulls a sick man's leg, the editor is glad if he can collect his bills at all. Revenue only. We are living for fun to spite the doctor."

ALAMEDA is ready to adopt the Commission form of government—and will soon be casting her nets for a city manager. The new charter provides for a salary of $3000 or more per year for the manager, to be appointed by five commissioners elected by the people. The next move will be the commission form of government for counties for which the Grand Jury of 1916 recommended an Educational Campaign.

THE grand jury recommended reducing the number of justices of peace in the county from sixteen to six as an expense curtailment. The most feasible plan is the location of these justices in the county in such towns that the adjoining towns may be served by the justice travelling to them instead of the constable travelling to the justice with two or three culprits and drawing so much of the county funds in mileage. A saving of mileage for at least one passenger would always be made. The justice in Campbell could in this manner serve this entire part of the county and save about $2000 of the county money annually in salaries and half that much in mileage. Planning thus, Palo Alto would have a justice; Santa Clara one; San Jose two; and Gilroy one.

IF THE CHINESE LOTTERIES have a goat in this county, and more especially in San Jose, here's hoping that some one will hang out a baited clothesline and get it. These infernal schemes have secured the goat of many a citizen in the past. Why not reciprocate?

JOHN A. PIKE writes from Los Angeles to the Kansas City "Star," and says that the repeating done at the last election is the most horrible thing he ever read about. So? Well now, John, old piker, what about the colonization of booze voters in your own little burg, and in San Francisco, and Sacramento, and Stockton, at the time of the same election? You hadn't read about that, had you? You had not, and we shall tell you why. Because there was not a single solitary daily newspaper published in any one of the California towns we have just mentioned, and comparatively few country sheets, that wasn't subsidized by the booze interests through their advertising organizations, that's why, John. Now, suppose you get your old coat off and get in here and help clean up your own state before you go having any more catfish about the illegal voting in Kansas City, last fall, or any other fall.—Mt. View Register-Leader.

THEY say now that Adam was married twice, Eve being his second wife. If this is true then we can understand why the poor old chap didn't have a rag to his back when we first made his acquaintance. Well, even at that he didn't have to publish a country newspaper.—Mt. View Register-Leader.

The Prune and Apricot Grower's association has won a big battle in securing the necessary acreage and stock subscription. In fact $5000 more than required has been signed for and the organization will elect a board of Trustees March 1. The plan is to secure a constant and steady price for the fruit of this valley and state as has been done by the raisin growers. The operations in the gambling marts will be much reduced as far as prunes and apricots are concerned when this organization gets to working.

Snowdrop Superstitions.

Those who have tried it declare that the petals of snowdrops dried and crushed to powder make a fragrant and exhilarating snuff. However, some of our country folk who fill their pipes with all kinds of weeds as substitutes for tobacco might not care to hand round a box filled with snowdrop snuff.

In many rural parts of England the snowdrop is a flower of ill repute. It is unlucky to carry the first spray of the season into the house, and it is a barbarous act to offer snowdrops to any one of the opposite sex. Such a gift is supposed to imply a wish for the death of the recipient.—London Chronicle.

Mendelssohn's "Elijah."

Mendelssohn in 1827 read the thirteenth chapter of the first book of Kings and was so struck by the verse "Behold the Lord passeth by" that he took it as the foundation for his oratorio "Elijah," which was begun in 1840 and in 1846 sent for translation to England, where on Aug. 13 rehearsal was begun for the first presentation of his work.
